Snow Hill Farm is a large house that is largely the product of remodeling done around 1945. It is seven bays long and two bays deep. The southwest gable is constructed of brick laid in Flemish bond and has two stepped brick at water table level. There are no openings on this side, but there is a chimney atop the wall. Two of the basement grill frames remain in place but the rest has been covered by later additions. As it stands today, the three central bays form a pavillion with pediment, the entrance door located on the south side of the pavillion. The two bays south of the entrance appear to be part of the original house. Another chimney is located about in the middle of the present structure which may have been the end of the original house. On the bay side is a two-story screened porch across the entire facade. Several French doors open onto the porches.

5. PHYSICAL CONDITION OF STRUCTURE Endangered NO Interior Exterior good

The house is located on a farm overlooking the Chincoteage Bay and is kept in very good condition. It is of interest, due to part having a brick gable.
